Well the covers are starting to be pulled back on the new look, expanded Great Britain Bulldogs website. It is still early days so far, so there's not much fanfare, but the ground work has been laid and now we're in the process of adding more content and features on a rapid basis. The site had to go offline for a brief while whilst we upgraded our servers to support the added functionality this website requires, but once that occurred last month, we used the opportunity to open a fresh tin of paint and sort the plumbing out. Think of this like a new home... we're just in the process of moving the furniture in ;) Coming soon will be a large multimedia gallery looking to display as much Bulldogs related material as we can get our hands on, be it images from LA or other tours and camps, to video clips, sound files (like the webcasts) and anything else that's fun and football related. Blogging, Alumni, FAQs, and more are planned. We want this site to allow you to become more involved in it's updating and working, and we're taking steps to include tools and security to let you do your bit and be part of the Bulldogs community. We really want you to help contribute to the content, be it photos from Bulldogs past and present, news reports, roster lists, stories of glory and battle, biographies of players/coaches/staff... you name it, we probably want it to share with everyone. Please contact us and contribute - try emailing webmaster@gbbulldogs.org! Some of these additions may disrupt the site's working temporarily, but don't worry, we're monitoring this closely and hopefully you'll soon have a much improved site including a large media gallery, many more features and the latest news.
